APPLE HARVEST

Harvest apples when they're at the peak of their quality . . . and handle carefully to reduce bruising.

That's the advice from Fred Dreiling, associate horticulturist at V. P. I., who says that picking apples is a specialized jo and one that becomes easier when the right techniques ar. used.

There is no work in the orchard which requires as much direction as does picking, Dreiling says. His suggestion to orchardists is that they show each picker the proper picking methods. "We can often raise a fine crop of apples only to lose the returns in improper harvesting practices.

Each step in harvesting apples, and several suggestions on proper picking practices are included in a new circular, "Picking Virginia Apples," Information for Growers, Operators and Foremen." Write the Agricultural Extension Service at V. P. I., Blacksburg, for a free copy.

Bloodmobile To Visit

With another visit of the Red Cross Bloodmobile to Appomattox scheduled soon, the Rev. R. Carl Maxwell of the local Chapter has issued a new appeal for volunteer blood donors.

The opening of hostilities in Korea found the armed forces' stocks of plasma practically exhausted. At that time the Department of Defense called upon the Red Cross to collect blood to replenish the stocks for use in both combat and non-combat operations of additional hostilities in any part of the world. The Red Cross accepted this responsibility. The Department of Defense has now advised that its supplies of dried human blood plasma have been gravely depleted by the demands of the Korean campaign.

Each region in the Blood Program has been furnished a quota of blood which is the minimum amount to be collected for defense during the fiscal year, 1951-52. The proportionate part of this total assigned to the local chapter represents its share of what is needed from the nation as a whole.

A national promotional campaign will begin September 10 to acquaint the public with the need National leaders will head the appeal

Harvesting Of Apples

Autumn in any part of Virginia is lovely, but visitors to the western part of the state will have the added thrill of watching the harvest of one of the state's major crops—the famous apples of the Shenandoah Valley. This year the visitor may witness the harvest of one of the largest crops in history from picking stage to the factory.

Harvesting is already under way and Williams Red, McIntosh, and Summer Rambos are being packed, but the real harvest, the last of September and first of October are best. Then the combination of tangy fall air and autumn foliage aids in making the harvest more beautiful.

Most activity can be seen around such apple centers as Winchester, Charlottesville, Mount Jackson, Harrisonburg, Staunton, Waynesboro and Roanoke. By driving through these areas one may see the harvest in progress from now until well into October.

To follow the apples from the orchard to the grading and packing plants or to the processing plants is of unusual interest. Most packers are delighted to welcome visitors to their plants and many processors will also. The Winchester Chamber of Commerce is a point of call where complete information about visiting these plants is available.

Council Seeks Way To End Traffic Toll

Richmond, Va., Sept. 5.- Its study emphasized by one of Virginia's worst traffic records in history, the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council convenes in Richmond Friday, September 21, for a public hearing on means of promoting greater highway safety.

The hearing will be open to all comers—interested organizations, agencies, civic groups, private citizens, and any who have suggestions or recommendations to offer on the subject of cause and cure of accidents and traffic fatalities.

The Council has already started machinery for the collection of statistical data from state agencies concerned with the problem, including the Department of State Police, the Division of Motor Vehicles and the Governor's Highway Safety Committee. This data will be analyzed and carefully studied in conjunction with information assembled at the public hearing.

The VALC study was requested by Governor Battle last July after the highway fatality trend continued upward despite strenuous efforts in the field of driver education and and strict law enforcement.
